

Tawney Hager

EDU 200- Introduction to Education

October 24, 2017

Teaching Philosophy

As an educator my responsibility is to lead students down a path of learning, to not only teach them the material necessary to move on to the next grade but to also show them how they impact their own day to day life. Educated citizens are important to have living in the world, and that education begins in the classroom. The basic life skills and materials necessary to live in society will take place through a fostering environment inside the classroom in order to help students begin to apply these skills outside the classroom.

As an educator it will be my top priority to provide an education that is fit for each student, I will do this by presenting the information in a variety of ways to assure I am reaching each learner. My goal as a teacher is to guide students in their learning and help them master grade appropriate concepts. I will do so in an environment that fosters a love for learning in each student. Learning is a lifelong process that I will make my duty to instill into my students as well. I will incorporate aspects of social emotional instruction into my classroom. I will make it a priority to foster positive relationships inside the classroom, so all learners feel as though they belong. As an educator I will make it a top priority to not only be an educator and a role model but to instill this into my students.